Ganfeng Lithium continues to face significant headwinds in H1 2025, with declining lithium carbonate prices severely impacting profitability. While the company maintains its position as one of the most comprehensive lithium product suppliers globally, operational challenges and inventory risks. As of 2019, it is the largest pure lithium producer in the world. As of 2022, it is also the largest lithium salt producer in China and the third largest in the world, as well as the second largest lithium processor in the world (after the Chilean). In 2020. [pdf] Net Profit Margin: Ganfeng. Ganfeng Lithium is a Chinese mining company that specializes in the production of lithium, a key component in the manufacture of lithium-ion batteries. The company was founded in 2000 and is headquartered in Xinyu, Jiangxi Province, China. Ganfeng Lithium has grown rapidly over the years, expanding. Narrow-moat Ganfeng's 002460 third-quarter revenue fell 43% year over year leading to a net profit decline of 98%. The first nine months' revenue and net profit accounted for 66% and 49% of our full-year forecast, respectively. The profit miss was mainly due to a decline in lithium product sales. In 2024, Ganfeng Lithium's net profit attributable to the parent company will be 1.4-2.1 billion yuan, and multiple factors such as the plummeting price of lithium salt and the sharp drop in the stock prices of the lithium mining companies held by it will significantly put pressure on its. Ganfeng, originally a producer of lithium metal and compounds, has expanded into upstream lithium mining and downstream battery production and recycling. We anticipate this integrated value chain will create significant synergies, benefitting Ganfeng's gross profit margin (GPM) in the long term.
