After experiencing growth throughout the energy transition period, solar equipment imports collapsed 58-65% across Q1-Q3 2025, representing one of the steepest sectoral declines in the dataset. The reversal stems directly from escalating tariff policies. Global container booking volumes fell by 49% between the last week of March and the first week of April 2025, according to Freight Waves. Imports from China to the United States collapsed by 64%, with imports of apparel and textiles declining by a whopping 59% and 57%, respectively. The figures. Our comprehensive analysis of quarterly US import data reveals that 2025 has become a watershed year for American trade volumes, marking the most significant import contraction since the pandemic recovery. For the first time since March 2023, monthly import volumes are falling below the 2 million. As businesses cancel orders from China, U.S. imports continue to plummet, with a 43% week-over-week drop in containers through April 28. "We haven't seen anything like this since the disruptions of summer 2020," said Kyle Henderson, CEO of trade tracker Vizion. An empty container ship of COSCO. Following President Trump's tariff blitzkrieg on Liberation Day, April 2, US maritime trade may face an abrupt disruption. The latest high-frequency data on container freight bookings show that overseas shippers rushed to send goods to the US over the past year to preempt the trade war, but have. Ocean freight rates are rising in Q2 2025, at an alarming rate—again. Shipping a container from Shanghai to Rotterdam now costs $6,000+, up from just $1,800. According to Freightos, this spike isn't just a seasonal fluctuation—it reflects deep, structural disruptions across the maritime logistics. The solar panel container market faces a perfect storm: China's new polysilicon production hubs in Xinjiang and Inner Mongolia will slash raw material costs by 18-22% by Q3 2025. Combine this with Germany's accelerated Energiewende 2.0 infrastructure projects requiring 14,000+ containers annually.
